Evaluation of Student Teaching

Summary Evaluation of: Marianne DeMarco Date 12/17/97

(In discussing the readiness of the student for employment as a teacher, some useful areas for consideration may be: relationships with pupils and staff members, planning, classroom management, teaching techniques, special interests and talents, areas in which continued improvement is desirable and recommendation for type and level of employment).

It was a pleasure to work with Marianne DeMarco as my Associate Teacher this semester. She demonstrated initiative and resourcefulness and was also very organized. She quickly learned to implement good classroom and behavioral management techniques as she progressed through the semester. Her computer skills are excellent and she was able to assist the class with many activities and projects. She worked cooperatively with other members of the faculty and staff.

Marianne's lessons were well planned and carried out. She included a variety of materials which were attractive and appropriate to the lessons. Her instructions and directions were clear and easy to follow. She encouraged the involvement and participation of all the students by using a variety of questioning strategies during class discussions.

In my opinion, Marianne DeMarco is a very conscientious person and would make a fine teacher.
